EDITORIAL OVERVIEW MSP CHANNEL INSIGHTS

ANGEL BUSINESS COMMUNICATIONS has been a leading business to business media organisation for over 40 years, with a proud track record of national and international publication and event innovation. When it comes to the IT Channel, we are the co-developer and co-owner of the highly successful MSS series of one-day conferences, with events taking place in London, Manchester, Amsterdam, and the Nordics.

Building on the success of these events, the MSP Channel Insights publication was launched to provide a major content platform to ensure that our high-quality database of event attendees is kept informed of Channel news, service and technology developments on a continuous basis.

We do this through the digital magazine, the innovative video magazines and the website hub. All these content formats focus on the major business and technology topics which are essential reading for Channel organisations. So, whether it's the digital or video magazines, or the website, you'll find news, product launches, articles, blogs and interviews focusing on key issues such as digital transformation, skills development, growing and evolving a channel business, the transition from VAR to MSP and the increasing importance of optimising the customer experience.

Alongside this content, you'll find plenty of technology coverage – with security, AI, IoT, storage and servers, automation, networking and telecoms, DevOps (and many other Ops!) and quantum computing being front and centre.

New for 2025, we have developed the publication database significantly, to 63,000 industry professionals – reflecting the growing importance of the Channel in terms of the overall IT supply chain.

We are confident that our innovative multimedia content platform, working alongside our successful events, provides a unique, high-quality environment - the perfect environment to ensure that your marketing message, carefully developed in partnership with MSP Channel Insights, is seen by the key Channel decision makers in the UK and further afield.

COVER STORY - SCHNEIDER ELECTRIC

APT and Schneider Electric transform The Fibright Institute's data centre to fast-track advanced viral research

Seeking a new strategy to modernise its IT and legacy core systems and deploy them away from its existing buildings, a hospital was made to explore the benefits of a modular, containerised data centre solution. The containerised data centre also includes container monitoring and management systems, delivered via Schneider Electric EcoStruxure IT Expert centre infrastructure management (ICIM) software. This is supported by hybrid environmental monitoring, with over 50 data parameters measured and managed.

APT and Schneider Electric have transformed the Fibright Institute's data centre into a modern, modular, containerised solution. The new data centre is housed in a purpose-built container, which is easy to transport and install. The containerised data centre is supported by Schneider Electric EcoStruxure IT Expert centre infrastructure management (ICIM) software, which provides real-time monitoring and management of the data centre. The containerised data centre is also supported by Schneider Electric EcoStruxure IT Expert hybrid environmental monitoring, which provides real-time monitoring of over 50 data parameters.

Challenges

Managing the complex, multi-faceted, distributed data centre environment was a significant challenge. The data centre was spread across multiple buildings, making it difficult to manage and maintain. The data centre was also subject to frequent power outages, which was a major concern for the hospital.

The Solution

By partnering with APT and Schneider Electric, the hospital was able to modernise its data centre and improve its operational efficiency. The containerised data centre is easy to transport and install, and it provides a secure and reliable environment for the hospital's data. The Schneider Electric EcoStruxure IT Expert centre infrastructure management (ICIM) software provides real-time monitoring and management of the data centre, and the hybrid environmental monitoring provides real-time monitoring of over 50 data parameters.

Other projects with APT and Schneider Electric

APT and Schneider Electric have worked together on several other projects, including the modernisation of the Fibright Institute's data centre. The hospital is pleased with the results of the project and is looking forward to working with APT and Schneider Electric on future projects.
